Church official met suspect in bombings

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An official of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints confirmed Monday that he met briefly with Mark Hoffmann just hours after the two fatal bombings in which Hoffmann has been identified by police as the chief suspect.

In a statement released by the church Monday, Elder Hugh W. Pincock, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy, said he not only had met with Hoffmann the day of the bombings, but had earlier helped arrange a large loan for him through First Interstate Bank, where Pincock served as a director.

The money was intended for purchase of the so-called "McLeese Collection" documents dating back to the 1800s.

Pincock said he met briefly last Tuesday with Hoffmann and that the topic had been the bombings that killed Christensen and Sheets.

"I was parking my car when he was leaving the first level of the church parking lot. Our conversation revolved around the tragedy where two fine people had been killed that morning," Pincock said.

David Sam to become Utah's new federal judge

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Judge David Sam will become the newest member of Utah's federal court bench during swearing-in ceremonies Friday, said Chief U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins.

The ceremony will be at 12:15 p.m. in Jenkins' courtroom. Members of the judiciary, the state and federal bar associations and the public are invited, Jenkins said.

Sam, originally serving as a 4th District Court judge in Provo, where he has resided a year since Gov. Cal Rampton appointed him in 1979.

A merit selection committee chose Sam, and he was nominated by Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch to replace former Chief Judge Aldon Anderson, who took senior status last December.

Sam was commissioned by President Reagan Oct. 16, following his confirmation by the Senate, and will be the ninth federal judge appointed in Utah since statehood was granted in 1896.

His appointment will bring to four the number of fully active judges in U.S. District Court.

Arabs reject Israeli bid to renew peace search

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Tuesday he called for negotiations with Jordan because Israel must regain the initiative in the search for peace.

Peres' proposal, which came in speech to the United Nations on Monday, appeared to offer little for the Arabs. The proposals were promptly rebuffed by Jordan and criticized at home by Israeli hawks.

The call for direct talks to end the state of war and resolve the Palestinian problem came as Jordan was trying to improve relations with neighboring Syria, a lone state that has refused to talk peace until it achieves military parity with Israel.

A statement issued Monday, after Jordanian-Syrian talks in Riyadh under Saudi Arabian sponsorship, said Jordan rejected "all partial and unilateral settlements with Israel." A high-ranking official said this was King Hussein's been arranged for Monday evening, and Mandia had signed a consent form at 10 p.m. Around the same time the donor heart failed, and by 11 p.m., Mandia's heart was transplanted and started pumping in and out of consciousness. Burnsides said.

He said doctors suspect Mandia is suffering from spasms of the brain's blood vessels. While not life-threatening, the spasms could lead to permanent brain damage, although there is no evidence of that so far, Burnsides said.

"He has not said anything," said Burnsides at a briefing Tuesday morning.

Peres acknowledged there was only a "possibility" his peace feeler would be answered, but he cautioned against taking initial public reactions from Jordan and other Arab countries at face value.

Minister wants to talk with S. African guerrillas

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rioting flared outside major cities Tuesday with up to eight blacks killed reported, and a white South African minister said he would further champion his right to talk with the African National Congress, the main guerrilla organization trying to overthrow the government.

President P.W. Botha warned that a meeting would "amount to a challenge of the state's authority."

Security police reportedly arrested a leader of the United Democratic Front, the main multiracial opposition party, in Johannesburg, and colleagues of Trevor Manuel, a member of the front's executive who is of mixed race ancestry, said he was detained under a security law that allows police to deny the victim a trial.

"They just walked straight up to him, handcuffed him and took him away," said Vernon Simmers, an office worker for the front.

Witnesses said rioters swarmed around the black and white areas of neighboring parts of Cape Town, where it is becoming increasingly dangerous for whites to travel the highways linking the city to its international airport.

Heart recipient lapses, then picks up strength

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The first Penn State stable condition recipient lapsed into critical and unstable condition Tuesday with reduced brain function, but later rebounded and spoke to his brother, a transplant surgeon.

"See if you can get me something to eat," was Anthony Mandia's request of his brother around midday, said Dr. John W. Burnsides, a spokesman for the Hershey Medical Center. "His level of consciousness is clearly higher."

The 44-year-old Mandia, who had been listed in critical and stable condition from the implant Friday until the setback, remained in critical and unstable condition Tuesday afternoon, said Burnsides. A hoped-for transplant of a human heart had been arranged for Monday evening, and Mandia had signed a consent form at 10 p.m. Around the same time the donor heart failed, and by 11 p.m., Mandia's heart was transplanted and started pumping in and out of consciousness. Burnsides said.

He said doctors suspect Mandia is suffering from spasms of the brain's blood vessels. While not life-threatening, the spasms could lead to permanent brain damage, although there is no evidence of that so far, Burnsides said.

"He has not said anything," said Burnsides at a briefing Tuesday morning.

Jury deliberates verdict for Ronnie Lee Gardner

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The capital homicide case of Utah State Prison inmate Ronnie Lee Gardner was sent to the jury late Tuesday afternoon immediately following attorneys' final arguments in 3rd District Court.

Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney Robert L. Stott, pursuing a first-degree murder conviction, charged Gardner with "brutal, tumultuous and inhuman conduct in effecting" his death from the Metropolitan Hall of Justice on April 2.

Attorney Michael Burdell was killed, and bailiff Nicholas Kirk was critically wounded after the inmate slipped a gun a female accomplice as he was being escorted to the courthouse for a hearing on another charge.

Defense attorneys James and Andrew Valdez sought to dislodge the 15-day trial that their client never wanted to kill anyone and that the shootings resulted when a dazed and confused Gardner saw his escape plans foiled.

However, in his summation, Stott questioned why a loaded gun was part of the escape plan if the weapon was only supposed to be a scare tactic.

St. George faces suit for lighting LDS temple

ST. GEORGE (AP) — City officials, claiming the historic structure's tourist value outweighs possible constitutional conflicts, will fight a local lawyer's federal lawsuit to halt St. George's practice of lighting the outside of a Mormon Temple.

The suit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City by Phillip L. Foremaster, asks the court to order the city to stop lighting the temple and to force the city to eliminate drawings of the temple from city signs and logos.

The suit also asks for an accounting of public funds used to light the temple's exterior and for damages, if appropriate.

"Our position is that the issue is not a religious issue," City Manager Gary Espin said Tuesday. "It's a question of a historical structure and historic landmark in our community and also one of economic concern with the tourist attractions in St. George, of which the temple is one of the biggest."

Tuition method may replace ticket 'lottery'

The committee organized to construct a new football ticket distribution system has narrowed down the many proposals into one they said should please most students.

"The number of students who would be able to get tickets would be 10,500, but those students would attend all games," said David Jones, ASBYU Academics vice-president and chairman of the committee.

The final proposal was formed through discussion of all the student input collected from The Daily Universe poll and other sources.

"I think the proposal takes most of the various student ideas and fits them into the restrictions of BYU," said committee member Brent Colton, a junior from Richland, Wash.

"Our proposal is that during the April tuition pre-payment and through the touch-tone registration system, we use the existing seniority system to give all students an equal chance for tickets," said Jones.

The students would then pay for their tickets at the same time as final tuition payment. When the students pick up their activity stickers for the fall semester, the "football" ticket would appear on the back.

"The students could then go to the Marriott Center anytime before the first game and pick up their tickets," Jones said.

Deer turns on hunter after sustaining a shot

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Richard Greenhagen of Salt Lake has learned not all deer take the hunter's bullet lying down. In fact, he's had the misfortune to meet a buck who tried to take Greenhagen down with him.

Greenhagen said things appeared to be going as planned when he shot the buck in the Salt Creek Canyon area after the state's hunting season opened Saturday. He was confident the deer was dead and began to clean it up.

Suddenly, the buck jumped up, turned on the hunter and charged him, pushing him backward and eventually gouging him in the leg.

What a surprise!

"I was really surprised when the deer got up," Greenhagen said. "I was surprised to be right in the Jules County Hospital in Nephi." As many deer as I've killed in the past, it really surprised me that it was even able to get up. It happened so quick. After it was all over, I gave the deer plenty of room."

At first, the hunter didn't think his injury was that serious. And when the deer finally died, Greenhagen finished cleaning him and then walked back down to the truck. His brother hauled the animal back to camp.

Wound more serious

"I walked around for quite awhile before I went to the doctor to get it cleaned out," said Greenhagen. "I thought it was just a shallow wound, but it wasn't."

When the hunter reached the hospital, however, it was determined that the wound was more serious. The buck's antler had gone into Greenhagen's leg 6 inches, just missing both his leg and his artery.

"I guess I was pretty lucky," he said Monday.

It's happened before

Grand Jensen, big-game supervisor for the Division of Wildlife Resources, said such incidents have happened before.

"It won't be the first time or the last time," he said. "I've heard of the deer getting up before. I always walk up behind them. You never want to go in front of the deer, especially if it's facing downhill. A wounded animal can't go uphill, but it can lunge quickly downhill."

G. Leslie Norris, an award-winning poet and short story author, spoke Tuesday of the many discrepancies that exist in a poet's life: vision vs. real-life events.

'Discrepancies' fascinating, says forum speaker

By LESLIE HANING

University Staff Writer

The discrepancies in a poet's life — one sees experiences with the lives of their visions and the events of their lives — are what make the study of poetry and its authors fascinating, according to Tuesday's Forum assembly speaker.

G. Leslie Norris, an award-winning poet and short story author, said. Often the differences make wondrously small tragedies. "The responsibilities and stresses in a poet's life, especially that of Dylan Thomas, are enormous," said Norris. "I am interested in the lives of poets. I love discovering how and where they've lived, knowing the look of the stones and fields and streets they make immortal with words; what they were doing when they weren't writing those mirror poems we call poems," he said.

Dylan Thomas: poet

Dylan Thomas, a great poet and story-teller, was born in Swansea, south Wales in 1914. "He was actively aware of his birthdays," said Norris. He wrote at least three poems celebrating them or maybe mourning them.

For Thomas, the state of childhood meant complete happiness, a condition so deep and all-embracing that he didn't even recognize it, said Norris. In his story "Extraordinary Little Tough," he makes this absolutely clear."

Some of Thomas's happiest early days were spent on Fern Hill, the farm in Carmarthenshire rented by his uncle and aunt. "It remained for Thomas the one pure and perfect place in the world, where he was received as a prince, warmed by his aunt's love," said Norris. And Jones wrote stories, poems and music together. "They happily roamed the wilds of Cemdonkin Park together, chewing through trees, playing cowboys and Indians, meeting the strange and lonely people Dylan would later commemorate in his poems."

Thomas wins fame

During all this time, Thomas was writing the poems soon to make him famous. "Now, Oct. 23, is his well-known poems is 'The Force That Through the Green Fuse' ...

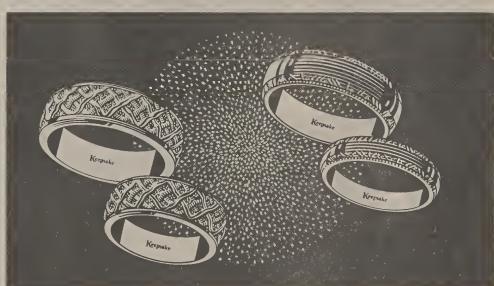

"It (the poem) was important because it won him for a prize, part of which was the publication of his work in book form."

The world comes up with poets, as with everyone else, said Norris. "And toward the end of his life he began to look back at the days when perfection was known to him, the days of his childhood."

Two years ago a memorial stone for Dylan Thomas was dedicated in Poets' Corner of Westminster Abbey.

Norris lamented. "I still feel the uselessness of that death, the loss of the great unwritten poems."

First through third place slots in individual scores were held by BYU team members after 36 holes. Nancy Callan was first at 150, Karen-Mike Zielenki was just one stroke behind with 151 and Martha Vargas was third with 154 strokes.

BYU newcomer Callan took the second-round lead at the tournament Tuesday by shooting her second 3-over-par 75 of the tournament.

BYU player Mariana Pacheco had 157 strokes and Trisha Ziegel had 178.

"We played well (Tuesday) but had trouble on the eighteenth hole, we went six-over-par. It's a tough par four going uphill over a water hazard to the green, everyone had to use a wood for their second shot," BYU coach Gary Howard said.

"It's the hole that cost Kelli Antolock (BYU All-American) the Public Links title in 1982."

At press time BYU appeared to have the Kansas Invitational in the bag with a 22-stroke lead over Missouri.

The competition began Monday and by mid-afternoon the day, BYU had an 11-stroke lead over Missouri.

Howard said on Monday, "I feel good about what we're doing, I think we'll increase our lead with every round."

Y's '81 NCAA golf win highlight' for coach

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of reports reliving some of the best moments and figures in BYU sports during the 1980s.

ERIC GOODELL

university Sports Writer

It happened four years ago, but Karl Fehr vividly remembers his golf team's triumph at the NCAA Golf Tournament in San Jose, Calif.

"It was the highlight of my career," he said.

The '81 golf season started off well for the Cougars as they took first in the Bechtel Tournament at the Logan Inn, Utah.

But it took another five tournaments for them to clinch another victory. It came in the tournament in Nevada.

Still, when it was all over, BYU would be top honors five times and second

12 times, during their 12-tournament campaign. The Cougars would then successfully defend their WAC title by a scoring 22 strokes.

And this was with a team that wasn't posed to have a good year in 1981.

Clampett gone to pros

Bobby Clampett, three-time All-American and twice named the most outstanding player in the WAC, had gone to professional golf, leaving the Cougars with what critics deemed just an above-average team.

"There were many who felt he was 80 percent of the squad and without him we were just another good team, certainly not enough to win the NCAA," Fehr said.

Returning team members Dick Zokol,

Steve Cleaver, Barry Willardson and avid DeSantis weren't convinced, however. As far as they were concerned, ek Fehr, a newly-recruited freshman from Seattle, certainly wasn't going to hurt the team any.

As the youngest member of the varsity, Fehr's performances in 1981 would be good enough to rank him second on the team.

The Cougars may not have seemed like a contender for the crown, but they were prepared for competing against Sun Belt powerhouses such as Oral Roberts, Houston, Oklahoma State and Arizona State in the NCAAs.

BYU started the first day of the NCAA championships shakily, shooting a 296 total for the first round of the eight stroke. Also ahead of them were New Mexico, Houston, Texas A&M, Texas and pre-tournament favorite Arizona State.

This didn't keep the Cougars down for long, however. Tucker was convinced his team was playing well, but they needed to change their approach to the competition.

He encouraged his players to believe he felt his players could play better. With this encouragement, they set the course on fire with a blazing 280, 14 strokes better than the day before. It was the only sub-par performance that any team would manage in the tournament.

Zokol sets pace

Zokol paced the team that round with a 66, including five straight birdies. It was one of the most exciting rounds of golf he had played. "I was one of those ultimate highs in golf when you know you are in absolute control. It doesn't happen very often," he said.

Tucker, not wanting to breed overconfidence in his players, allowed himself to say "nice round, guys."

With this performance, the Cougars charged into the lead—five strokes ahead of second-place Texas A&M.

The next day, BYU hit rock bottom.

With the round only half over, the Cougars lost the lead to Oral Roberts by a stroke. Despite the encouragement of former Cougar Johnny Miller, who was at the tournament giving moral support, the Cougars shot a collective 10-over par on the front nine.

However, instead of failing further behind, the team made a dramatic turnaround on the back nine that was good enough to recapture the lead.

On the fourth and final day of the tournament, the race quickly turned into a two-team catchup between BYU and Oral Roberts.

Player contact limited

Since golfers on the tournament had little contact with other team members, it was almost impossible for them to know exactly how the team was doing as a whole. The little they could do was compare their score to the opposing players they had played with.

Team anchorman Zokol had contact with Tucker, however, and despite pleas, the coach would not reveal the Cougars' standing until after his tee shot on the 18th hole.

"Unless you break your leg, we're won it," Tucker said.

Zokol was not to take any chances on his next shot. He aimed for the "fat" part of the green, but knocked the ball into a bunker far from the pin. As he walked down the fairway, he hobbled almost like he had broken his leg.

Zokol was thinking there was nothing that could stop the Cougars. After Zokol recovered his position, he hit a great shot out of the trap, the ball landing 15 feet from the hole.

After two shots, the ball was in the hole, and BYU had clinched the championship—the first of its kind for the school.

Cougars' Molini receives honors for his 2-TD game

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — BYU tight end Trevor Molini and University of Utah defensive back Eric Tucker have been named the WAC offensive and defensive players of the week.

Molini, a 6-foot-4, 229-pound sophomore from Reno, Nev., caught a career-high 11 passes for 186 yards and two touchdowns in BYU's 45-23 victory over New Mexico Saturday night.

He caught an 18-yard scoring pass from Robbie Bosche in the first series of the second half to give BYU a 17-14 lead and grabbed a 31-yard TD pass in the last period.

In his last three games, Molini has 30 receptions for 418 yards.

Tucker, Utah's return specialist, played a big role defensively as the Utes rallied to beat San Diego State, 39-37.

In the fourth quarter, he assisted and three unassisted tackles, the senior from Lynnwood, Calif., recovered a fumble, broke up a pass and returned an interception 86 yards for a touchdown.

'The Imaginary Invalid' offers humorous view of hypochondriac health obsession

By CARMA HOYNACKI
Senior Reporter

With eight prescriptions and 12 enemas this month, and 12 prescriptions and 20 enemas last month, it's no wonder Mr. Argan's not as well now as he was. At least that's what he thinks.

Mr. Argan (Charles Metten) is the invalid in "The Imaginary Invalid," a play that opened at the Pardoe Drama Theater, HFAC last week, and will run Oct. 26, 29-31, and Nov. 1-2.

Written and adapted by Michele Therese and John Kander, "The Imaginary Invalid" is a comical farce about a man who is so worried that no one will love or take care of him, that he creates an illness to bring him the attention and care of doctors. He depends so much on their opinions that he even asks how many grains of salt to put on his eggs.

THEATER REVIEW

Metten, who both directs and stars in the play, opens it with Argan frantically worrying about his "illness." The picture of energy and health, Argan must continually be reminded that he is sick.

Angela (Linda Woodruff), is Argan's maid-servant, and although small in stature, she is the only character strong enough to stand up to Argan.

Throughout the play she tries to show him what a fake he is. Her superb performance is marked by her rapport with the audience and ability to bring Argan to his senses.

Cougar enthusiast's zeal explodes in original song

By MICHAEL PURDY
University Staff Writer

While most BYU football fans support the team by filling Cougar Stadium on Saturday afternoons, this is not enough for one person.

Rick Abbott, a senior from San Francisco majoring in studio composition, spent a day in August writing a song for the defending national champions.

"I'm a Cougar fanatic, and I love this football team," said Abbott. "I couldn't wait for the season to start."

The song, titled "I'm a Cougar," has been released and is available in stores throughout the area. Many Provo radio stations are playing it.

Music has been important to Abbott for many years.

"I grew up playing in bands in San Francisco since the sixth grade," said Abbott. "When I graduate I want to go back and write more music and play in a rock band."

Abbott has also written jingles for local businesses and would like to write film scores and music for television. Abbott thought of writing a song for the football team more than a year ago, but did not begin working on it until mid-August.

"I was practicing the piano, and the melody just started to come," Abbott explained. "I wrote the chords and the lyrics in one afternoon."

The song was recorded the following day at a local recording studio using talent from the BYU band and arranged it. Rich Gibbons, a senior at Orem High School and the lead singer for a local band, agreed to sing the song. Local musicians Brian Chatter and Sam Cardon arranged it.

When the song was recorded, Abbott called many of the radio stations in the area to convince them to play it.

"I would play the tape of the song to the stations over the phone," Abbott said. "The response was very positive, and quite a few stations are playing it."

The song is also getting a good response from those who have heard it.

"The music is great, and the lyrics are very original," said Doug Hansen, a sophomore from Denver majoring in Spanish. "I think it is great that someone would do this. It is good for the team and the university."

Singer returns to stage after battle with health

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Acuff twirled his fiddle bow and sang a couple of his trademark tunes in his first full-fledged performance on the Grand Ole Opry stage in 19 weeks.

The 82-year-old Acuff, known as "the king of country music," was greeted with a standing ovation Saturday night to mark his return after being out of commission with heart problems since June.
